

Emergency preparedness 101: Tips to stay safe

Natural disasters are becoming more frequent and severe across Canada, driven by factors such as climate change. Yet, a 2021 public opinion survey on emergency preparedness revealed that only 11% of Canadians have tried to reduce the risk of their home being affected by weather-related emergencies or disasters. This means many Canadians may not be prepared and haven't taken the necessary steps to protect themselves. Whether it's floods, wildfires, extreme heat, earthquakes, storms, or hurricanes, disasters can strike anytime, anywhere. As we recognize Emergency Preparedness Week, now is the perfect time to take action. Read on to discover practical steps to safeguard your family.
